Fall: The best season for home improvement

Brandpoint Content

The rituals of fall include sending kids back to school, raking leaves and cheering on the hometown football team. In addition, a new fall tradition has emerged for America's nearly 74 million homeowners – home improvement.

This fall promises to be particularly popular for home projects. Lower gas prices are boosting people's discretionary income and Metro study's latest residential remodeling index points to a continued rise in activity.

Like many trends, there isn't one particular reason fall has emerged as a popular time for home improvement; several factors play a role.

Energy efficiency is top of mind

With colder weather on the horizon, homeowners shudder at the thought of higher heating costs. They upgrade windows, layer in more insulation, service or replace old furnaces and, in some cases, do all of the above.

The weather is nice

Home improvement projects can be hard and even grueling work, particularly for DIYers. Lower temperatures and humidity create a much more comfortable environment for getting things done (and rhetorically keeping your cool when obstacles inevitably arrive).

The holiday entertaining wow factor

Everyone wants their home to sparkle when they welcome family and friends during the holidays. Completing a home improvement project during the fall sets up a big reveal when the holidays roll around.

Falling prices

Fall is an excellent time to save money by finding great deals on home improvement supplies and service. Year-end sales begin and discounts can be steep. Retailers like Lumber Liquidators, with their annual Yard Sale in October, often have discounts to clear inventory before the New Year. Also, contractors are busiest during the warmer months - their business cools as the weather does.

Facing tight timelines and tighter budgets, homeowners often need to prioritize their projects. Installing hardwood floors often provides a high return on investment, both from a quantitative (home value) and qualitative (pride in ownership) standpoint.

No matter what a homeowner chooses to do during the fall home improvement season, it will help reduce cabin fever during the winter months.

Wise Furniture Co.

106 Ferry St., LeSueur

Wise Furniture Co. was officially established when Thomas E. (Tom) Wise purchased the business in 1958 from his employer, Fritz Rothen, and "re-branded" it The Wise Furniture Company. Tom and his wife, Jeanne, provided the growing families of LeSueur and surrounding areas with not only furniture basics but the newest, most up-to-date furniture fashions available. Tom and Jeanne were committed to providing customer service to each and every customer—a tradition which continues to this day. After Tom's passing in 1989, Jeanne Wise continued the Wise Furniture Co. service traditions.

Mickey Smith joined Wise Furniture Co. after graduation in 1981, providing delivery and other customer services. In 1990, Mickey moved into sales – making sure each transaction included customer satisfaction before, during and after the sale. In 2005, he purchased the business from Jeanne.

In 2002, Dana Manske joined the Wise Furniture Company as Sales Associate. She also assisted with the management and daily operations and, in 2007, became co-owner.

Wood's Edge Alternative Heating, LLC, in Glencoe provides a variety of alternative heating sources for those who want to get away from traditional natural gas and propane heating. They have both indoor and outdoor stoves that can burn not only wood, but corn, pellets or coals.
